

Abstract

Title of a work:	Geographical determinants of sport participation in high school students
Objectives of the thesis:	Identify and evaluate according with the research at selected schools whether geographical location of residence and school, respectively distance between home and school can determinate where students are held leisure and sports activities, in particular.
Method:	This is a quantiative research using a questionnaire method. Obtained data were evaluated using statistical methods – the percentage methods and methods of frequencies.
Results and conclusions:	There was found the impact of the distance between residence and school respectively lenght of time spent in transport to the school which determinates choice of leisure and sports activities for students of secondary school.
Key words:	leisure, leisure activities, sports, geographical determinants, adolescence, students